THE CODE OF THE NEW YORK

POLITICIAN.

In our last we quoted two articles from the New York political code as given in Parson's life of Jackson.

The whole of it is a capital specimen of political satire and well deserves to be given entire. Here it is:

I. Politics is a game, the prizes of which are office and power.

II. The game so far as our Side is concerned must be played with fairness.

III. In elective governments, all politics necessarily resolve themselves into a contest for the highest place.

To that end, therefore, everything else is to be subordinate.

IV. The people are sovereign, as Queen Victoria is sovereign, and elected always with the profoundest deference, the sovereign is NOTHING.

In England the minister, in America the politician, is everything.

But the sovereign is to be humored to the top of his bent, and so led.

V. Fidelity to party is the sole virtue of the politician. He only is a politician who would vote unhesitatingly for the Devil, if the Devil were a party man.

VI. No man must be allowed to suffer on account of his fidelity to his party. No man must be allowed to the people he may have made himself by his fidelity, he must be provided for the moment it can be safely done.

VII. The party door must always stand wide open for the reception of converts from the other side, but shut against repentant renegades.

VIII. Personal enmities are to be most scrupulously avoided. In dealing with an opponent, he must be treated with a view to his one day becoming "one of us."

IX. Nothing is so fatal in politics than to make premature publication of the programme. Nothing is to be done to-morrow. A surprise is often half a victory.

X. Every partisan must contribute to a contest both according to his means and his disposition; rich, liberal men, money; rich, mean men, labor; idle men, the show of their presence.

XI. Local organizations are the main reliance for victory. Every ward, town, village, hamlet, neighborhood, must have its party organization—its every voter, under his disposition ascertained and noted down.

XII. A great State influence is the product of a large number of small influences. No man can be great in Washington who is not master of his own State; no man can be great in Kentucky, who is not master of his own county; no man can be great in Georgia, who is not master of his own parish; no man can be great in Massachusetts, who is not master of his own town.

On the same principle, no man can be great in his county, before he can be great in his parish; no man can be great in his parish, before he can be great in his town; no man can be great in his town, before he can be great in his ward; no man can be great in his ward, before he can be great in his street; no man can be great in his street, before he can be great in his house; no man can be great in his house, before he can be great in his room; no man can be great in his room, before he can be great in his bed; no man can be great in his bed, before he can be great in his pillow; no man can be great in his pillow, before he can be great in his head; no man can be great in his head, before he can be great in his brain; no man can be great in his brain, before he can be great in his mind; no man can be great in his mind, before he can be great in his soul; no man can be great in his soul, before he can be great in his body; no man can be great in his body, before he can be great in his bones; no man can be great in his bones, before he can be great in his muscles; no man can be great in his muscles, before he can be great in his nerves; no man can be great in his nerves, before he can be great in his blood; no man can be great in his blood, before he can be great in his heart; no man can be great in his heart, before he can be great in his lungs; no man can be great in his lungs, before he can be great in his stomach; no man can be great in his stomach, before he can be great in his intestines; no man can be great in his intestines, before he can be great in his bladder; no man can be great in his bladder, before he can be great in his rectum; no man can be great in his rectum, before he can be great in his anus; no man can be great in his anus, before he can be great in his orifice; no man can be great in his orifice, before he can be great in his exit; no man can be great in his exit, before he can be great in his destination; no man can be great in his destination, before he can be great in his end; no man can be great in his end, before he can be great in his purpose; no man can be great in his purpose, before he can be great in his plan; no man can be great in his plan, before he can be great in his scheme; no man can be great in his scheme, before he can be great in his design; no man can be great in his design, before he can be great in his intention; no man can be great in his intention, before he can be great in his will; no man can be great in his will, before he can be great in his power; no man can be great in his power, before he can be great in his ability; no man can be great in his ability, before he can be great in his skill; no man can be great in his skill, before he can be great in his art; no man can be great in his art, before he can be great in his science; no man can be great in his science, before he can be great in his philosophy; no man can be great in his philosophy, before he can be great in his wisdom; no man can be great in his wisdom, before he can be great in his knowledge; no man can be great in his knowledge, before he can be great in his understanding; no man can be great in his understanding, before he can be great in his judgment; no man can be great in his judgment, before he can be great in his discretion; no man can be great in his discretion, before he can be great in his prudence; no man can be great in his prudence, before he can be great in his caution; no man can be great in his caution, before he can be great in his vigilance; no man can be great in his vigilance, before he can be great in his alertness; no man can be great in his alertness, before he can be great in his readiness; no man can be great in his readiness, before he can be great in his promptness; no man can be great in his promptness, before he can be great in his swiftness; no man can be great in his swiftness, before he can be great in his speed; no man can be great in his speed, before he can be great in his haste; no man can be great in his haste, before he can be great in his urgency; no man can be great in his urgency, before he can be great in his necessity; no man can be great in his necessity, before he can be great in his demand;
